

ENGINEERS FAVOR THE DANIELS PLAN

Puzzled a Bit as to How He Would Have Advisory Board Chosen.

OFFICIAL REQUEST TARDY

The officers of several of the eight important American engineering societies which Secretary of the Navy Daniels has invited to elect two representatives each to the new Naval Advisory Committee on Inventions, of which Thomas A. Edison is head, were somewhat divided in feeling yesterday on Mr. Daniels' plan and his method of going about it, yet on the whole they promised their cooperation.

The most highly pleased with the idea was Calvin W. Rice, secretary of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He said he heard some time ago that Secretary Daniels contemplated some such step, and that the society was in hearty accord with it. Although Mr. Daniels' official request had not yet been received, Mr. Rice said the twenty-one members of the governing council undoubtedly would meet soon and choose two representatives. He could not say who these would be.

Great Need for Engineers in War. "We are much interested in assisting the Government to get the country into a state of preparedness for war," said Mr. Rice. "In fact, we appointed some time ago a committee of our own, which has been cooperating with Major-General Leonard Wood and the Army War College in forming a reserve corps of mechanical engineers."

Mr. Rice said that if every officer and private in our present army were an engineer we should still not have enough engineers for our army in case of war. Our committee is trying to reserve to the Government the services of engineers, particularly in providing men available to plan coast defenses and to facilitate supplying munitions, clothing, automobiles and everything else needed to the Government. Mechanical engineers are the heads of all those manufacturing concerns whose cooperation would be so necessary in a war.

"I do not know, of course, who would be our representative on Secretary Daniels' committee, but we have some fine men on the committee I have mentioned—Major William H. Wiley, former Congressman from New York; James M. Dodge of Philadelphia; Dean W. P. Moss of the engineering college of Illinois University; and H. A. Gillis, a consulting engineer of Washington, D. C."

8,000 Electricians to Choose From. F. L. Hutchinson, secretary of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"I think Mr. Lincoln will appoint two men and will not need more than a few days," he said. "Our membership of 8,000 is a big field to choose from. If Mr. Lincoln does not make the appointments, our directors probably will do so in August."

W. L. Saunders, president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"I think President Marx might name two men if promptness is desired," said Mr. Hunt. "Our directors do not meet until September in San Francisco. I really cannot guess who would be appointed our delegates."

A Lesson From Germany. "The creation of this board is a wise move," said Dr. Edward Weston, head of the Inventors Guild, which will have five members on the advisory board. "That's where Germany has the advantage. She has obtained the services of all her scientists and engineers, and that is responsible for her efficiency in war."

Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"I think President Marx might name two men if promptness is desired," said Mr. Hunt. "Our directors do not meet until September in San Francisco. I really cannot guess who would be appointed our delegates."

A Lesson From Germany. "The creation of this board is a wise move," said Dr. Edward Weston, head of the Inventors Guild, which will have five members on the advisory board. "That's where Germany has the advantage. She has obtained the services of all her scientists and engineers, and that is responsible for her efficiency in war."

Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"I think President Marx might name two men if promptness is desired," said Mr. Hunt. "Our directors do not meet until September in San Francisco. I really cannot guess who would be appointed our delegates."

A Lesson From Germany. "The creation of this board is a wise move," said Dr. Edward Weston, head of the Inventors Guild, which will have five members on the advisory board. "That's where Germany has the advantage. She has obtained the services of all her scientists and engineers, and that is responsible for her efficiency in war."

Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"I think President Marx might name two men if promptness is desired," said Mr. Hunt. "Our directors do not meet until September in San Francisco. I really cannot guess who would be appointed our delegates."

A Lesson From Germany. "The creation of this board is a wise move," said Dr. Edward Weston, head of the Inventors Guild, which will have five members on the advisory board. "That's where Germany has the advantage. She has obtained the services of all her scientists and engineers, and that is responsible for her efficiency in war."

Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

"I think President Marx might name two men if promptness is desired," said Mr. Hunt. "Our directors do not meet until September in San Francisco. I really cannot guess who would be appointed our delegates."

A Lesson From Germany. "The creation of this board is a wise move," said Dr. Edward Weston, head of the Inventors Guild, which will have five members on the advisory board. "That's where Germany has the advantage. She has obtained the services of all her scientists and engineers, and that is responsible for her efficiency in war."

Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers, said he had not yet seen Mr. Daniels' invitation, but supposed it had gone to President Paul M. Lincoln in Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUST ISSUED
SEMI-ANNUAL REPORT
OF
LAWYERS MORTGAGE COMPANY

The only Mortgage Company in New York which publishes in full detail statements of its business.

Mailed on Request

LAWYERS MORTGAGE CO.
RICHARD M. MURD, President
Capital, Surplus & Pr. $9,000,000
50 Liberty St. N. Y. 184 Montague St. Bkn.

BELL AND WRIGHT SURE TO BE ON NAVY BOARD

Daniels Will Appoint Them if Not Picked by Scientific Societies.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—It became known today that Alexander Graham Bell and Orville Wright and others who have distinguished themselves in various fields of science are assured of membership on the naval advisory board of inventions and development if they should fail of nomination by the scientific societies which Secretary Daniels has invited to pick the personnel of the board.

An informal announcement to this effect was made by Secretary Daniels as a result of a suggestion that if he adhered strictly to the selections of scientific bodies some of the men he is most anxious to have serve the Department on the board might fail to be chosen for membership.

Mr. Daniels made it plain that the advisory board would include not only men of science but also men of letters and of other professions. It is apparent, therefore, that the advisory board will be a much larger body than was originally contemplated.

When the Secretary of the Navy originally announced his purpose to assemble such a board he said that it would be made up of ten or eleven members. Yesterday Secretary Daniels wrote letters to the heads of eight scientific societies inviting each to name two members.

It is known that similar invitations are to be forwarded to other organizations not included in the list made public yesterday. Fear is expressed by some naval officials that some difficulty may attend the task of choosing members for the advisory board, especially if the nominations made by the various scientific societies should arouse antagonisms in those organizations.

In this event, it is suggested, Mr. Daniels might be forced as a matter of policy to make the selections himself regardless of recommendations made by the scientific societies.

THE FRANCE MAKES RECORD.

Greatest Gallie Liner a Transport for Dardanelles Troops.

The French liner France, which has not been in transatlantic service since last October, has made a record run by transporting 1,600 troops and 4,000 tons of supplies in less than four days between London and the Dardanelles, with 4,000 French troops.

Officers of the French liner La Touraine, yesterday from Bordeaux, reported that the France had made the trip in 10 days, 16 hours and 40 minutes, a record for a liner of her size.

The France is making regular trips between the Dardanelles and Toulon.

FRANCE ANSWERS APPEAL FOR GOLD

Millions of Francs Added to Country's Reserve as Result of Call.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun. Paris, July 20.—The country seems to have responded generously to the appeal of the Minister of Finance, M. Ribot, for deposits of gold to add to the country's reserve. Yesterday the municipality of Paris deposited $60,000,000 ($100,000,000).

Up to July 17 the Havre branch of the Bank of France had received 1,385,550 francs ($277,110) from 2,329 depositors. Deposits at Marseilles amounted to 2,313,000 francs ($462,600). Rouen, 1,000,000 francs ($200,000). Lyons, 1,160,000 francs ($232,000). Nancy, more than 2,500,000 francs ($500,000).

PROBABLY NOT L. W. BATES. Body Buried in Ireland May Be Killed, However.

London, W. Bates, chairman of the Belgian Relief Commission, received yesterday a despatch from Mr. Frost, United States Consul at Queenstown, saying that the body of a Lusitania survivor found on the Limerick coast and thought at first to be that of L. W. Bates, Jr., has been buried as that of Leonidas Bates of Atlanta, Ga.

Consul Frost said, however, that the body, including a watch, a pocket square and a cigar case, had been sent to London for inspection by Newton B. Knox, a friend of Mr. Bates, and that the body was not to be buried until an effort will be made to identify it.

Another scheme that was to release thousands of British soldiers from the work in Flanders was the proposal of the women of England to take their places. Some 80,000 women enrolled, but employment has been found for only a couple of thousands of them. With the natural result that the 80,000 who registered are now dwindling away.

Next came the revolt of the Flour and the Daily Mail. It has already been explained in The Sun how this attack upon Lord Kitchener and the War Office brought down upon Lord Kitchener and the War Office the wrath of the public in modern times. The strange thing is that though Lord Northcliffe was attacked, the attack was not directed at the War Office, which was the target of the attack.

Another scheme that was to release thousands of British soldiers from the work in Flanders was the proposal of the women of England to take their places. Some 80,000 women enrolled, but employment has been found for only a couple of thousands of them. With the natural result that the 80,000 who registered are now dwindling away.

Next came the revolt of the Flour and the Daily Mail. It has already been explained in The Sun how this attack upon Lord Kitchener and the War Office brought down upon Lord Kitchener and the War Office the wrath of the public in modern times. The strange thing is that though Lord Northcliffe was attacked, the attack was not directed at the War Office, which was the target of the attack.

Another scheme that was to release thousands of British soldiers from the work in Flanders was the proposal of the women of England to take their places. Some 80,000 women enrolled, but employment has been found for only a couple of thousands of them. With the natural result that the 80,000 who registered are now dwindling away.

Next came the revolt of the Flour and the Daily Mail. It has already been explained in The Sun how this attack upon Lord Kitchener and the War Office brought down upon Lord Kitchener and the War Office the wrath of the public in modern times. The strange thing is that though Lord Northcliffe was attacked, the attack was not directed at the War Office, which was the target of the attack.

BRITAIN NOW REALIZES HER REAL PERIL IN WAR

Londoners Blame Late Liberal Cabinet for Unjustified Optimism Which Prevailed Formerly—Officials Criticised for Delay in Munitions Manufacture.

Special Correspondence to The Sun. London, July 6.—It is only a few weeks since Mr. Asquith was asked in the House of Commons as to the report that a coalition Ministry was to be formed soon. The Prime Minister replied that there seemed no necessity for anything of the kind and that nothing of the kind was contemplated. Five days later Mr. Asquith had in his pocket the resignation of every member of his Cabinet, with the exception of Sir Edward Grey, and two or three days later the formation of the coalition Government was announced.

It would be unfair to suggest that Mr. Asquith, when he made this reply, knew that he would almost at once be plunged into the world of getting together the coalition. It is only right to assume that the absolute necessity of either forming such a Cabinet or resigning and appealing to the country was forced upon him. It is only right to assume that the absolute necessity of either forming such a Cabinet or resigning and appealing to the country was forced upon him.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

LIFE INSURANCE WAR LOSSES SLIGHT

Mortality Average for Past Year Lower Than for a Long Time.

U. S. RISKS PROTECTED. The war has not had any material adverse effect upon American life insurance companies, according to an officer of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Contrary to the general impression, the mortality for the year just ended, said this officer, was 74 per cent. lower than the average mortality for the previous fifteen years.

"For the most part the war risk is visited upon young men," said William J. Graham of the Equitable yesterday. "These young men are not as likely to be insured as the older men and the amounts they carry are proportionately less than that of the older men."

"The common fallacy is to assume that every man who goes to war is doomed. While the present war has been one of tremendous losses, the actual number of killed, as compared with the enormous numbers engaged and enlisted in the services of the various countries, is not appallingly large. The death hazard is always present. It may be interesting to note, for instance, that the mortality among the participants in the bloodiest of battles of the civil war could be measured by a limited space in the lifetime of the average selected risk. For example, the death rate at Gettysburg, which reached the appalling high figure at that time of 55 per 1,000, was only equivalent to the risk on a preferred life of the age of 45 to 52."

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically everything in connection with the prosecution of the war was no longer possible. Members of both Houses of Parliament and on both sides who had knowledge of the truth were getting too restive longer to be held in check. The public was mystified, dissatisfied and suspicious. The Government was pointed out by practically every one who has written about the conduct of the war in this country the English people were fed on false hopes. One has only to recall that months ago the people were told that the war would last for a very short time without causing a general upheaval which would have resulted in a forced resignation and a general election.

The policy of secrecy as to practically